TO THE AFFLICTED!

HAMPTON'S VEGETABLE TINCTURE FOR THE CURE OF CHRONIC DISEASES.—The most safe and certain remedy ever known to the world for various chronic diseases, after they have reached a state, and assumed a character, hitherto considered desperate and incurable.

Chronic Rheumatism, Scrofula, Kings Evil, attended with swellings and ulcers, sore eyes, and loss of sight, to a frightful extent, have been cured. Females pining away by reason of deranged secretions, broken calculations, and obstructed menses, (monthly courses) even when attended by spasms or fits, have been readily relieved.

Dyspepsia yields without a struggle to its mild yet powerful action upon the stomach. In Catarrh, or Cough, Rheumatism, and Fistula, it never fails to cure, as we have fully proved. All diseases having their origin in an impure state of the blood and fluids, will be speedily and effectually removed by this invaluable medicine.

This tincture tends directly to excite a healthy action in the stomach, liver, lungs, and kidneys, to purify the blood and other fluids, by expelling every particle of morbid matter from the system, and therefore never fails to prove a valuable remedy for the diseases which calomel has been invariably used. Old sores and ulcers, or any chronic affection; and for the calomel disease, it is an infallible remedy.

This remedy is perfectly vegetable, mild, agreeable, and safe for persons of any age, either sex, or any condition, acknowledged by those who have tried it, to be the best known family medicine.

The justly celebrated tincture creates a craving appetite, and the patient is left at liberty to indulge it. The use of this medicine will change the complexion from a pallid to a fine blooming one. After using this tincture for six weeks, a person of any age may eat anything that a child of ten years of age, in full health, could eat, without the least inconvenience.

Dr. Hampton is in possession of certificates from the Hon. Henry Clay, Col. Richard M. Johnson, Hon. John B. Dawson, of La., and many others, who have been benefited by the use of this tincture.

For certificates, &c., see pamphlet.
 REMEMBER! Hampton's Vegetable Tincture can be had only at the Segar Store of

H. G. RITTER,
 Pennsylvania avenue, between 11th and 12th streets, and at
 A. G. GARDNER'S
 Seed Store, F street, between 9th and 10th streets, opposite the Catholic church.

Each bottle has the proprietor's signature on the label. may 8-6m

THE TRUTH SOMETIMES NOT FOUND OUT UNTIL TOO LATE.

SUCH is often the case in regard to persons taking medicine. They are induced by plausible reasoning, false representation and doctrines, to employ medicines that, so far from being adapted to their disease or sickness, absolutely increase the symptoms, destroy the constitution, rack the whole system, and bring on a gradual decline, terminating in death; previous to the fatal termination, however, (but unfortunately too late,) the truth is found out that the pills, mixtures, &c. they have been taking were composed of the most powerful and dangerous ingredients, prepared too by persons knowing nothing of disease or the nature of the medicines they recommended, depending altogether upon the "general doctrine of such impostors," that their medicines will "kill or cure." Be advised, then, if you find it necessary to take some medicine for purifying the blood and cleansing the bowels, to take nothing but Dr. Leidy's justly and deservedly celebrated SARSAPARILLA BLOOD PILLS, the only pills containing Sarsaparilla in their composition—the safest and best as well as the most effectual that can be taken.

Old and young, at all times, without regard to weather, may take them without fear of taking cold, and without restraint from occupation or usual course of living. Upwards of 1,000 certificates have been published, various times, of their efficacy. More than 100,000 boxes have been sold in Philadelphia in twelve months. These facts go to prove their value, or so many never would be sold in so short a time, in a place where they are manufactured; this, however, arises in part from the fact that the manufacturer of them (Dr. Leidy) is well known at home as a regular physician and apothecary, knowing the true nature of diseases and of the medicines he recommends, attested by the most celebrated physicians, among whom are Dr. Nathaniel Chapman, Dr. Wm. Gibson, Dr. W. E. Horner, Dr. Samuel Jackson, Dr. Robert Hare, Dr. P. S. Physic, Dr. T. C. James, Dr. W. P. Dewees, Dr. J. Redman Cox, Rev. W. H. Delaney, Robert Adrian, L.L.D., &c. &c.

Orders for Dr. Leidy's BLOOD PILLS are daily received from the North, South, East, and West, and the most flattering accounts, from every direction, of their unparalleled success. A single box (25 cents) may save as many dollars, if taken in time, instead of the dangerous medicines now forced on the public, and by taking which persons so often find it necessary at last to take Dr. Leidy's Blood Pills, to counteract their injurious consequences.

They are prepared only, and sold Wholesale and Retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, No. 191, North Second street, below Vine street, Philadelphia. And by SONG.

BY J. A. MAYBIE.

Young Sir Knight on his raven steed,
 Came from the tented field;
 He gaily doff'd his battered helm,
 And down he flung his shield.
 "No more," he cried, "my plume shall dance
 'Mid shining ranks of war—
 And what is Fame?—I've won renown—
 Upon my breast's a star!"

He took his lute, then o'er the wave

To his fair ladye flew,

Who, weeping by her lattice sat,

When nigh his shallop drew.

"I come," he sang, "my beautiful!

In deeds of Love to dare;

Oh! brighter far his star—thine eye—
 Than Glory's star I wear!"

GLIMPSES OF THE GIFTED.

A LEGEND OF VENICE.

"Where are the ardent hopes of youth,
 When life looked bright and fair,
 And young Romance was robed like Truth?
 Echo answers—where?"
 Mrs. Cornwall Baron Wilson.

[Concluded from our paper of Wednesday.]

The following morning she found a note waiting her, traced in a strange hand, and requesting her to meet the writer that evening on the Rialto, as he wished to see and speak to her for a few moments in private before he finally quitted Venice. It was merely signed "Bartholomeo;" but the throbbing heart of the conscious girl fully supplied the other name; and as the poet had calculated upon, love soon got the ascendancy over duty and prudence; and accompanied by her attendant, he found her punctual to the appointed hour.— And the woman being dismissed to a short distance, he had to supply her place in supporting the trembling form of his young companion, who lent heavily on his arm—her quick breathing alone breaking the deep silence of the place and hour.

"Do not unmask," whispered the poet, at length in a voice that was slightly agitated, "you may be recognized."

Poor Bartholomeo! he feared, perhaps, to trust himself with the sight of that beautiful face!

"You will think it strange," continued he, after a pause, "that I should have written to you thus; but I have seen you before, and felt an irresistible longing to impart my wild history to one human being ere I depart hence forever! thinking somehow, that you would at least pity me."

Vittoria answered not, for she dared not tell him how willingly, had need been, she would have died, how much more so she would live for him alone;—but she was thankful, nevertheless, that the secret of her young heart was yet her own.

"I was born," began the poet, "at Prescia," and Vittoria was awakened from her dreaming of all that she had ever heard concerning this "City of the Fountains," as it has been beautifully called, by the words which followed: "My father was a blacksmith," and Arnigio felt her suddenly start; but the arm which rested on his was not removed, and for a moment he wanted courage to continue. After all he had not sought the love of that noble girl, and was it his fault if she preferred him to Lorenzini? If she was ready as she had said "for his sake to give up rank and home and country?" But this was a sophistry unworthy the high nature of the poet, and he determined to consult only the future happiness of the young cousins.

"Go on," said Vittoria gently, observing that he paused.

"Pardon me, but my thoughts are apt to wander. As I have said, my father was a blacksmith."

Here was another start; the girl with all her romance, could not forget her own patrician descent.

"At eighteen," continued Arnigio, "having a taste for literature, I abandoned this humble calling, and was fortunate enough to procure, by unwearied and unremitting study, a doctor's degree, conferred by the University of Padua, and returned to practice in my native place. Lady, this was the happiest period of my life; for besides standing high in my profession, I loved and was beloved by one of the fairest and gentlest beings that ever walked this weary world of ours."

At this juncture in the story, the maiden suddenly found strength enough to do without the hitherto respectfully proffered support of her companion, and stood proudly erect, while her heart throbbed as though it would burst.

"Ah! she was beautiful, you say?" asked Vittoria eagerly.

"She was, indeed, and I have never seen one more so."

The girl put no more questions, and Arnigio, sorry for what he had said, hastened to make atonement for the involuntary error into which his passion had betrayed him.

"I might have been there now," continued he, "and she yet alive, but for my own daring and presumptuous ambition!"

"You were but fulfilling your high destiny," observed Vittoria gently; "had you remained a doctor, Venice would have had one poet less."

"Hush!" interrupted her companion, almost harshly; "wait until you have heard all! At the time of which I speak a fever broke out at Brescia rather debilitating than fatal in its effects, but sparing neither old nor young. I had previously turned my attention very much to this subject, and imagined out a bold experiment which could not fail of success. Lady, that this dream—for such it now seems—was reality to me then; that I believed in its efficacy as I did in Heaven, and my own salvation! that I had not the shadow of a thought it could work evil, even if it did not quite come up to my expectations of the good it was to effect, I need not tell you, when I add that she, the idol of my heart, with two young brothers, partook of it and died!—I had murdered them!"

Vittoria uttered a wild scream, and buried her face in her robe.

"For months," continued the poet, "I was raving mad! and the first impulse of returning consciousness was to curse those who, by hurrying me away from Brescia, had preserved a worthless and henceforth miserable life! Since then, I have become what the world calls great; I have risen to fame and honor. The fugitive doctor has been the guest of princes; the hand of the murderer sought in friendship by the potentates of the land, while his heart lies buried in the tomb of her he loved and destroyed! But remorse and disease have well-nigh done their work, and I return to-morrow to die like her at Brescia!"

"The saints have pity on you," exclaimed Vittoria, with a shudder; "for I see not how earthly aid can avail you anything."

"Thanks for the prayer, and now farewell!—You alone know the secret of my coming and going; and having obeyed the impulse which prompted me to disclose it, I shall quit Venice with a lighter heart."

"Farewell!" murmured the girl; and as he raised her hand, and pressed it lightly to his lips, a thrill of horror rather than passion fell coldly on her heart. The poet's high mission was accomplished; and the buried secret of years had found a voice at last.

Great was the excitement throughout all Venice when it became generally known that their idol had departed, most probably for ever! Vittoria alone expressed no astonishment, but only grew pale and shuddered when his name was casually mentioned in her presence; while Lorenzini mourned the absence of his friend with unfeigned regret, and not venturing to seek for consolation in the society of his cousin, might have been seen wandering over the city like a restless spirit, longing yet dreading for his probation to arrive.

And so the month passed away, at the conclusion of which Vittoria had agreed to come as before, and claim his promise; it had, indeed, been part of the conditions on which he was to grant it. But she sent her attendant instead, with a message that she was not well, and a few choice flowers, which, it is needless to say, were religiously preserved by Lorenzini, and after that he heard no more of her.

But as the time drew near when they were to meet and affix their signatures to the deed of betrothment, the girl having attained her seventeenth year, he began to wonder whether her stern father could have discovered her secret, and so detained her a prisoner against her will, in which case he determined to show his love by observing her commands even at the last moment, and at the sacrifice of his own happiness.

The night arrived at length; and Vittoria, simply attired, and looking, if possible, more beautiful than ever, stood leaning upon her father's arm; and at Lorenzini's approach, blushed deeply, and cast down her bright eyes. At the command of Signor Barnardi, she walked towards the table with a trembling step, and affixed her name to the parchment.

"Courage, dear cousin!" whispered the noble youth, "I will save you yet; I will not sign!"

"I have deserved this," said the girl; "and yet, somehow, I had thought you loved me too well to yield me up thus."

"Vittoria, I am but obeying your own commands," exclaimed the bewildered lover.

"Ah! but that was a month ago!" replied the maiden, with a bashful smile.

Lorenzini snatched first the pen, and then the fair hand of his plighted bride, which he covered with kisses. And henceforth there was not a happier couple in all Venice than these young cousins. Something of shame at her strange infatuation, mingled with gratitude for her escape, and his unchanging love, gave a dash of submissiveness to the hitherto brilliant and wayward heiress which was irresistibly bewitching.

But little more is known of Bartholomeo Arnigio, save that he died a few years after the events above mentioned, at his native place. His principal work is Le Rime, printed at Venice; while many others, both agricultural, medical, and historical, serve to assert his just claim to that high rank which has been assigned him in the literature of his age and country, a few of his biographers only reverting to that one dark passage in the otherwise brilliant career of the poet which we have imperfectly attempted to shadow out in our Legend of Venice.
